

Labour Community Advocate Training Program

Register Today

The Labour Community Advocate Training (LCA) program is developed by The Canadian Labour Congress and delivered and funded through United Way.

Participants learn about the social issues faced by working people and the resources available in their community. Members are trained in many areas including communication skills and interviewing and referral techniques so they can assist union members to find appropriate resources.

This program allows participants to explore the ways in which unions and other labour bodies can help build strong and vibrant communities.

Labour Community Advocate Training Level I

Date/Time: April 8-12; 9am-4:30pm with half-day on Friday
Location: Ironworkers 720 Hall; 10512 122 St NW
Cost: $150 per person

Light Lunch and coffee provided

The upcoming training will focus on the following modules:

- Unions and Communities
- Interviewing and Referral Skills (using 211 Alberta)
- Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion
- Community Services
- Principles of Communication
- Linking Labour and Community
- Stress and Burnout
- Addictions and Dependency

Registration

Deadline: March 1 2024

Interested members should apply to and be chosen by each local, as per your standard selection process.

Once a list of participants is determined, the local can email the participant list to:

Subject Line: Labour Community Advocate 2024

nfryzuk@myunitedway.ca